

Table of Contents

Preface

1. The God of Israel after Christendom

Supersessionism as a problem for systematic theology

Supersessionism and dialogue

Supersessionism and the church's standard canonical narrative

Supersessionism and the flight from history

A road map

PART ONE: THE LOGIC AND LIMITATIONS OF THE STANDARD CANONICAL NARRATIVE

2. A Flaw in the Heart of the Crystal: Justin and Irenaeus

The standard canonical narrative

Problematic aspects

The origins of the standard canonical narrative

Justin Martyr: a framework for the Scriptures of Israel

The legacy of the standard model

3. Christian Divinity without Jewish Flesh: Kant and Schleiermacher

Immanuel Kant's Religion

Friedrich Schleiermacher's The Christian Faith

Disembodied God

4. Consummation at the End of Christendom: Barth and Rahner

Barth and Rahner on Schleiermacher

Barth on consummation

Rahner on consummation

Covenant history at an impasse

PART TWO: THE UNITY OF THE CANON AFTER CHRISTENDOM

5. The Blessing of an Other: A Proposal

6. The Scriptures: The Economy of Consummation

Blessing and creation
Blessing and covenant
Blessing and eschatology
Systematic reflections

7. The Scriptures: Curse and Redemption

Curse and the economy of consummation
Redemption and the economy of consummation
Systematic reflections

8. The Apostolic Witness: God's Reign and the Name of Jesus Christ

The gospel
The shape of discipleship
The church amid Jews and Gentiles
Final consummation

Notes

Index