

Contents

Preface / xi

Acknowledgments / xv

Abbreviations / xix

1. The Immanent Divine and the Human Predicament / 1

How Far Is East from West? A Question for Comparative Theology / 1

Why Sankara, Why Tillich? / 7

A Method for Comparison: On the Idea of Comparative Categories / 12

The Human Predicament as Illness: The Medical Model

as a Tool for Comparison / 16

Disputed Theological Questions: What Is at Stake in the Conversation? / 18

Is a Christian Nondualism Possible? / 22

Comparative Theology as Interfaith Dialogue in Search of Mutual Transformation / 23

A Concluding Note on the Term Immanence / 25

2. Sankara on the Human Predicament:

Diagnosis and Etiology / 27

“The Hindu Refuses to Call You Sinners”: Opening the Question of the Human Predicament in Advaita Vedanta / 27

Sankara’s Anthropology: The Soul as Free Agent and Part of Brahman / 28

Sankara’s Diagnosis of the Human Predicament:

The Suffering of Samsara / 37

Sankara's Etiology of the Human Predicament / 45
The Impossible Possibility of Ignorance / 54

3. Sankara on Liberation from the Human Predicament:
Prognosis and Therapy / 59

Is Healing Available Premortem or Only Postmortem? / 59
Knowing and Not Knowing Brahman: On Why Sankara Is Not a Mystic / 60
Sankara on Therapy: Preparing for and Becoming Established in Liberating Knowledge / 80
Sankara's Prognosis: On the Liberated Person and the Possibility of Action after Liberation / 83
Immanence and Transcendence in Sankara's Theology:
On Apophatic Anthropology / 90

4. Tillich on the Human Predicament:
Diagnosis and Etiology / 95

Priming the Comparative Pump: Where Do We Begin? / 95
Preliminary Reflections on Courage: Arjuna's Courage and the Courage of Faith / 96
Introducing Tillich's Ontological Apparatus / 103
Ontology and the Human Predicament: Tillich's Etiology / 110
Tillich's Diagnosis of the Human Predicament / 121

5. Tillich on Salvation as Ecstatic Healing:
Prognosis and Therapy / 133

Ecstasy and Nonduality / 133
Transcendence and Immanence in Tillich's Theology / 136
God as Living; God as Spirit / 143
Tillich on Therapy: Salvation as Ecstatic Healing / 149
Tillich's Prognosis: Sanctification, Doubt, and the Ineradicable
Fact of Estrangement / 163

6. Reimagining Immanence:

Toward a Christian Nondualism / 169

Moving from Comparison to Construction / 169

Diagnosis: The Human Predicament as Self-Enclosed Finitude / 174

Comparing Etiologies / 177

Comparing Prognoses: Liberation and Salvation / 180

Evaluating the Medical Model / 182

Toward a Dynamic Apophatic Nondualism / 184

The Religious Possibilities Offered by Dynamic Nondualism / 195

Apophasis, Ecstasy, and Divine Immutability / 202

On the Coincidence between Immanence and Transcendence / 204

Glossary / 209

Index / 221