

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction: A Theology of Literature as Christian Revelation	1
Literature and the Horizon of Transcendence: Surveying the Past	1
The Possibilities and Pitfalls of Literature as Christian Revelation	9
Literature as a Mask of Christ	12
1. A Literary-Historical Reading of Hans Urs von Balthasar and His Sources	17
Reading Balthasar as a Literary Critic	17
Dominant Modern Literary Influences on Balthasar: An Overview	24
Balthasar's Literary Prolegomenon to Christianity	35
Part I. Pre-Christendom
2. "Only in the West": Christian Foreshadowings in Ancient Greece	43
Greek Literature as a Model of Human Integration	45
A Tragic Distance between Divinity and Humanity	50
Necessary Suffering and Death	60
Conclusion	73

3. Myth or Philosophy? Defending Literature's Preeminence	77
Standing Too Close to the Gods in Plato's Dialogues	78
Philosophy Transforms Myth into Religion	87
Virgil's Post-Platonic Mission to Build a Bridge to the Gods	95
Conclusion	107

Part II. Christendom

4. Dante and the Eschatological Limits of Literature	111
Defending Christocentric Temporality in Time and in Eternity	112
Reconciling God's Love with Damnation	120
The Limits of Literary Aesthetics and Counter-Aesthetics for Community	135
Conclusion	141
5. The Theater of Reconciliation in Shakespeare and Calderón	143
From Sanctioned Vengeance to Realized Reconciliation in the World of the Bard	145
Person as Actor in an Auto Sacramental	158
Succumbing to the Bourgeois Book-Sellers	164
Conclusion	172

Part III. Post-Christendom

6. The Rise of Promethean Salvation in German Romanticism	177
A Camouflaged Anthropocentrism in Goethe's Prometheus Fragment	179
The Redeemed Rebel in Faust	188
Lonely Obedience in Schiller's Dramas	202
Conclusion	209

7. After the Fall of Christendom: Children, Celibates, and Other Idiots	211
Holy Children of Novalis, Hölderlin, and Péguy	213
Dostoevsky's Holy Fool	227
Shipwrecked Nuns and the Dying Country Curé	236
Conclusion	246
Conclusion: Theological Appropriation of Hans Urs von Balthasar's Literary Criticism	247
Choosing a Rebel or a Redeemer	251
Blind Spots in Balthasar's Literary Tradition	263
A Theology of Literature as a Prolegomenon to a Global Dialogue	270
Works by Hans Urs von Balthasar	277
Bibliography	281