

Contents

Abbreviations	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
Part I. The Construction of Mark as the Interpreter of Peter
1. The Decline of the Patristic Consensus	19
2. The Re-emergence of the Patristic Tradition	57
3. From Paul's Fellow Worker to Peter's Interpreter	107
Part II. The Ideological Function of the Patristic Tradition
4. Toward a Theory of the Patristic Reception of Mark	163
5. The Gospel on the Margins of the Canon	185
6. The Clash of Rival Interpreters	229
Conclusion: The Centrist Christian Appropriation of Mark	267

Appendix: The Carpocratians and the Mystic Gospel of Mark	271
Bibliography	301
Index of Subjects and Modern Authors	329
Index of Ancient Sources	347