

Preface

I should like to express grateful acknowledgements for the help and advice that I have received from so many people. In particular I want to thank:

The students of the Sierra Leone Church Training Centre and Theological Hall who taught me so much, and without whom this book would not have been conceived, and the colleagues who encouraged my efforts.

The staff of SPCK, without whom it would have remained no more than an idea in the mind. My thanks go especially to Nick Beddow for his enthusiasm and encouragement, and to Daphne Terry for her attention to detail.

Stuart, Ruth, Mary and Paul for their patience over several years.

Those who over the years have shared their own enthusiasm for the study of theology, and encouraged me to do the same. My thanks to David Hinson, whose Introduction to the Old Testament in this series has been a useful teaching aid and provided me with a number of ideas.

The following people who kindly gave their time and their expertise to read the manuscript, and sent their comments and suggestions: The Reverend Dr C. K. Barrett, Professor Emeritus of Durham University; The Rt Reverend Dr R. P. C. Hanson, Professor Emeritus of Manchester University; The Reverend Canon John Hargreaves; The Reverend Canon Rodney Hunter of Zomba Theological College, Malawi; The Reverend Dr Mathew John, Principal of Bishop's College, Calcutta. Their comments were of great value and all have been given careful consideration.

My hope is that this book will be useful for those who are studying the New Testament for the first time, and that it will encourage them to go on to further study at much greater depth.

Nelson, Lancashire 1988

MARGARET BAXTER